Section B 段落匹配

Directions: 阅读下列段落，为每个句子选出所对应的段落。每个段落可能被选一次、多次或不被选择。

A These days, phone interviews are an unavoidable part of the job interview process, and for good reason: They save time and effort. But that doesn't mean that phone calls require zero energy on the part of the candidate. Many companies treat phone screening as the official first round of the hiring process. That means candidates are expected to go into them prepared with as much information as possible about the company, position, and their own skills and strengths.

B A big mistake people often make is talking about their personal lives. Don't talk about your personal life unless you're directly asked a question about what you like to do in your off-hours. "The point of a phone interview is to focus on getting to know a candidate's professional experience and goals," says Mckenzie Roark, campus talent specialist at Lithko Contracting. "A recruiter is trying to see if they are the best fit for a role, and learning about their personal life doesn't help. For example, when asked where you see yourself in five years, we don't want to know that you hope to be married or that you want to buy a new house. That is nice, but that isn't relative to anything professional."

C It might be tempting to cross something off your to-do list while on a phone interview, but recruiters and hiring managers can easily tell if your attention is elsewhere. Many interviewers are annoyed to see people who decide to multitask while on the phone interview. There are candidates who wash dishes, go for walks, or do grocery shopping during the interview. Needless to say, this doesn't reflect well on your level of interest in the position you're interviewing for.

D The question regarding pay is also best avoided. To be frank, it's simply too early in the process for you to be the one who brings up salary expectations. "Chances are if a candidate is participating in a phone interview, this is the first time they have talked with the company, and the first call isn't the appropriate time to talk about 'what's in it for you,'" says Justina Strnad, the Talent Acquisition Manager for Shiftgig. "Trust me, if you are a great candidate and make it to the next step, the hiring team is going to be very transparent about what's in it for you later on."

E "After wrapping up a phone interview, it is typical that the interviewer will ask the candidate if they have any questions. I can't stress this enough: ALWAYS ask questions," says Roark. "If we have had a great phone interview and then we wrap up and they don't have any questions for me, it pretty much ruins the whole interview. It tells me that the candidate is uninterested in the role, which in reality might not be the case at all," she notes. But surely, if you're interested in a job, you can think of something to ask your interviewer.

F It seems basic, but surprisingly, a lot of people are late to phone interviews. "About a quarter of the people with whom I schedule phone interviews aren't on time," says Sophie Cikovsky, who handles U.S. recruiting for Infinite Global. "While this bothers me personally, it's also indicative of someone who isn't very detail-oriented," she explains. "In order to identify this early in the hiring process, I started asking all candidates a few years ago to call me as opposed to calling them at an agreed-upon time. That way, if I hear from them at 1:13 p.m. or 12:49 p.m. instead of our planned 1:00 p.m. interview time, I have an early indicator that they might not be a great fit."

G "Make sure you test your headset and connection before dialing in," recommends Roark. "There is nothing more frustrating for a recruiter who has a structured interview guide in place having to repeatedly ask the same question over and over because they could not understand your answer due to dropped signals." Test-call a friend beforehand, or even call yourself from a landline if necessary; it will take less than a minute.

H You might be eager to get your point across or talk about your experience, but interrupting the interviewer is awkward and rude. "Interviewing can be stressful, and sometimes that stress manifests itself in speaking too fast, speaking too loud, talking over the interviewer, or attempting to answer the interviewer's question before they have actually finished asking the question," says Chris Dardis, a recruiting expert. "Don't do this." There's a big difference between being assertive（自信的）and being aggressive, and interviewers can always recognize it.

I It's tough not to say things like "um," "uh," and "like" in everyday speech, but these verbal habits become much more pronounced when speaking on the phone, says Dardis. "In face-to-face interviews, they're not as noticeable, because there are other things like your hair, suit, or body language to distract people." But in a phone interview, the only thing you have to go on is what you say and how you say it. "That's why it's so important to eliminate these words from your speech when doing a phone interview."

J Not knowing anything about the company or job you're interviewing for is way more obvious than you'd think. "Many people think that they don't have to put as much effort into researching the role or the company," says Steve Pritchard, an HR consultant. And if you have your laptop in front of you during the interview to do a few quick searches, they won't know the difference, right? Not exactly. "Seasoned interviewers will know whether an interviewee is researching while on the phone. The interviewer can often even hear the typing as they ask the question," he adds.

K "The key to success during a phone interview is clear and concise answers," says Dardis. "People's attention spans tend to be shorter over the phone. You don't want your future employer to lose interest in the conversation." He recommends practicing answers to questions you know will be asked ahead of time in order to be clear on what you're going to say. That way, you can prevent talking in an aimless manner.

Section C 阅读理解

Passage 1

Disgust is a universal human emotion. One type of disgust is called physical disgust, which protects us from eating or touching things that could be dangerous for us, such as raw meat or insects. Children experience physical disgust from a very early age, but do not achieve an understanding of the concept until they are around four years old. Some researchers maintain that there is another type of disgust, called moral disgust, that protects us from engaging in activities that can be perceived as morally wrong. Examples of moral disgust are stealing, lying or cheating. However, not all academics think that moral disgust really exists. Some say that when we refer to disgust in relation to moral issues, we are using disgust as a metaphor（隐喻）, and what we are feeling is in reality anger. If moral disgust appears quite late in development, it makes sense to think that there is actually a social component to it. Children learn about emotions in many different ways. Of special relevance are parents- children conversations about emotions. Indeed, children whose parents talk about emotions often have a better emotional understanding than children whose parents do not discuss emotions often. However, there are no studies that have examined how parents and children talk about disgust. This is what we set up to examine in our study. We asked 68 English-speaking mothers and their four-, six- or eight-year-old children to discuss some stories about moral and physical disgust. Our preliminary findings show mothers and children do talk about disgust, but mainly about physical disgust and not so much about moral disgust. When we asked mothers and children to discuss moral issues, such as whether it is OK to play with a child who has stolen someone else's snack, they linked this type of moral wrongdoing with the emotion of anger and not disgust. Does this mean that moral disgust does not exist? Some researchers suggest moral disgust exists in adults. Our findings suggest that moral disgust is either understood at a later age or is only used metaphorically, if at all, in children as old as eight years.

1. What does the passage tell us about physical disgust?
   A. It is an emotion as contrasted with thoughts.
   B. It is a concept beyond children’ s understanding.
   C. It is a mechanism to keep us from being harmed.
   D. It is an experience gained from any form of danger.
2. How do some researchers perceive moral disgust?
   A. It tends to appear in various forms of wrongdoing.
   B. It is just as annoying to people as physical disgust.
   C. It is a term used by common folk to describe anger.
   D. It stops people from doing anything morally wrong.
3. Why does moral disgust appear quite late in children’ s development?
   A. It needs to be learnt through social interactions.
   B. They have little control over its learning process.
   C. It is too complex for them to acquire.
   D. Their parents seldom talk about emotions.
4. What did the author and his colleagues want to examine in their experiment?
   A. What parents tell children against moral wrongdoing.
   B. What parents and children link moral wrongdoing to.
   C. How moral disgust is seen by children aged 4, 6 and 8.
   D. How disgust is discussed between parents and children.
5. What can we infer about moral disgust from the author and his colleagues’ findings?
   A. It is a notion hardly comprehensible to children.
   B. It rarely exists in children younger than eight.
   C. It is a term most parents use when talking to children.
   D. It exists in adults with a strong sense of justice.

Passage 2

After finding out details about a stranger, we mistakenly think that they also know about us. As a result, we act more honestly around them, according to a recent study in Nature. Past research has found that we tend to assume social relationships are reciprocal（相互的）. Most of the time, this assumption is accurate: someone you think of as a friend will usually consider you a friend too. But sometimes our social ties are more one-sided: for example, you might learn something about a stranger who doesn't know you at all. Researchers Anuj Shah and Michael LaForest wondered whether our tendency to believe that social ties are reciprocal could lead us to mistakenly feel that a stranger does actually know us. In a series of lab-based studies, this is exactly what the researchers found. When we know about strangers, we erroneously think they also know about us. But the really interesting finding came when the researchers stepped out of the lab, to conduct a field experiment. The team developed leaflets（传单）containing fairly ordinary information about local community police officers, such as their favourite food, hobbies, or reasons for joining the police force. They then sent out these leaflets to every apartment in a number of housing developments in disadvantaged areas. The officers themselves also dropped off cards to local residents containing similar information. Two months later, the researchers surveyed residents at these housing developments as well as control areas that did not receive leaflets or outreach cards. Residents were asked to imagine that they had committed a crime and how likely it would be that local officers would find out about it. They also rated how well the officers in the area knew them. The team found that residents of the developments that had received the leaflets believed it more likely that local officers would find out about illegal activity than residents of the control areas. Even more strikingly, the team found that immediately after the leaflet distribution, there were fewer criminal complaints and arrests in the areas around the developments that had received the leaflets than around the control developments. reciprocal?

1. What is the finding of a recent study in Nature?
   A. People are more honest with those who know them than with total strangers.
   B. People we want to have detailed information about are keen to know about us.
   C. People who get to know about a person wrongly assume the person knows them too.
   D. People who are familiar with each other tend to behave honestly in their everyday dealings.
2. What does the passage say about the assumption that social relationships are reciprocal?
   A. It is more the exception than the rule.
   B. It does not hold true in every situation.
   C. It does not apply to complex relationships.
   D. It is more accurate in one-sided social ties.
3. What did Anuj Shah and Michael LaForest want to find out about the belief that social relationships are reciprocal?
   A. Whether it may resolve misunderstandings about social ties.
   B. Whether it could help develop one’ s relationships with strangers.
   C. Whether it could help strengthen interpersonal relationships.
   D. Whether it may lead to false assumptions about a stranger.
4. When did Anuj Shah and Michael LaForest find something really interesting in their research?
   A. During lab-based studies.
   B. During a field experiment.
   C. While investigating local residents’ crime.
   D. While talking to police officers nearby.
5. What happened in the areas around the housing developments subjected to the studies?
   A. They saw fewer crimes than the control developments.
   B. They witnessed a swifter elimination of illegal activities.
   C. Local police responded more quickly to criminal complaints than before.
   D. Local police related better to residents there than to those in other areas.

The Board of Denver Public Schools is set to close several elementary and middle schools to make up for a decreased budget caused by declining enrollment. 丹佛公立学校董事会计划关闭几所小学和初中，以弥补因招生人数减少而导致的预算缩减。

The specific schools will be announced in the coming days, a district spokesperson said. 一名学区发言人表示，具体哪些学校将被关闭将在未来几天内公布。

The school board approved criteria to close schools with fewer than 215 students, as well as schools with fewer than 275 students and a projected decline in enrollment. 校董会批准了一项标准：关闭学生人数少于215人的学校，以及学生人数少于275人且预计入学人数下降的学校。

In the next three years, the district expects to enroll 3,000 fewer elementary and middle school students, it said. 该学区表示，未来三年，其小学和初中预计将减少招收3000名学生。

3,000 students may not seem like that many students, but to a budget where you're receiving per-pupil funding, that's about $36 million, district spokesperson Scott Pribble said. 学区发言人斯科特·普里布尔说，3000名学生听起来可能不算多，但在按生拨款的预算模式下，这大约意味着3600万美元的收入损失。

We know that there are impacts, and it's heartbreaking and difficult work, but in order for the district to stay out of debt, it's a step that needs to be taken, he said. 他说：“我们知道这会带来影响，这是一项令人心碎且艰难的工作，但为了不让学区陷入债务，这是必须采取的一步。”

The district said the decreased budget means it cannot provide the same mental health support, social and emotional services, or specialized programming to schools with lower enrollment. 该学区表示，预算削减意味着无法为入学人数较少的学校提供同等水平的心理健康支持、社会情感服务或特色课程项目。

Section B, Directions B部分，答题说明

In this section, you will hear two long conversations. 在本部分中，你将听到两段长对话。

At the end of each conversation, you will hear four questions. 每段对话结束后，你将听到四个问题。

Both the conversation and the questions will be spoken only once. 对话和问题都只播放一遍。

After you hear a question, you must choose the best answer from the four choices marked A, B, C, and D. 听完问题后，你必须从标有A、B、C、D的四个选项中选出最佳答案。

Then mark the corresponding letter on answer sheet 1 with a single line through the center. 然后在答题卡1上，用铅笔在对应的字母中间画一条横线。

Conversation 1 对话一

Good afternoon, Theatre Bookings International. My name's Philip. How may I help you today? 下午好，这里是国际剧院订票中心。我叫菲利普。请问今天有什么可以帮您?

Oh, good afternoon. My name's Helen. 哦，下午好。我叫海伦。

I've been trying to book tickets for the musical Cats in London on the evening of May 28, 我一直想预订5月28日晚上在伦敦上演的音乐剧《猫》的票，

but I can't get the computer to accept my card payment. 但电脑一直无法接受我的信用卡支付。

I've tried three times, but it just doesn't want to take it. 我试了三次，但它就是不通过。

That's okay, Madam. I can book it and take the payment over the phone if that's not a problem for you. 没关系，女士。如果您方便的话，我可以帮您订票，并通过电话收取费用。

That would be wonderful. I'm not very good with computers. 那太好了。我对电脑不太在行。

My husband usually does all of these things, but he is in Italy on a business trip until next Thursday, 我丈夫通常都负责这些事务，但他去意大利出差了，要到下周四才回来， and I know how quickly these things can sell out. 而且我知道这些票卖得有多快。

They do indeed, Madam. 确实如此，女士。

Firstly, can you confirm that it's the performance of Cats on May 28 at the Lion Theatre in London at 7.30pm? 首先，请您确认一下，是5月28日晚上7点半在伦敦狮子剧院上演的《猫》吗?

Yes, that's the one. And I will need two tickets, please. Not too close to the front. 对，就是那场。请给我两张票。不要太靠前。

Actually, all the tickets at the front are already sold out anyway, but I can offer you two upstairs near the middle. 其实前排的票早就卖光了，不过我可以给您安排两张楼座中间位置的票。

I assume that you don't want to be too high up. 我猜你不想坐得太靠上。

Oh my goodness, no. I'm scared of heights, and you can never see anything if you are too high up anyway. 哦，天哪，不想。我恐高，而且坐得太高的话，反正也什么都看不见。

No problem, Madam. I'll reserve those for you now, 没问题，女士。我现在就为您预留这些座位， and all we need after that is the details of your card number and your full name, and then we are done. 接下来我们只需要您的卡号和全名，然后就办好了。

Conversation 2. 对话二。

Hi John. Why haven't you answered my text messages lately? 嗨，约翰。你最近怎么不回我的短信?

Oh, I didn't know you had sent any. I turned off my phone almost a week ago and haven't turned it back on since then. 哦，我不知道你发了短信。我差不多一周前就把手机关了，从那以后就没再开过。

Why would you do something like that when our phones make our lives so much more convenient? 既然手机让生活方便这么多，你怎么会做这种事呢?

Well, I downloaded an app that recorded how much time I spent on my phone, 嗯，我下载了一个应用，用来记录我花在手机上的时间， and I was shocked to realize I was using my phone an average of eight hours a day, 结果震惊地发现，我平均每天要用手机八个小时， and on my worst day, I used it for twelve hours. 最严重的那天，我用了十二个小时。

Were you addicted to mobile phone games? I had a friend who was, 你是沉迷手机游戏了吗？我有个朋友就是这样， and he sometimes played them all day and into the night. 他有时候整天玩，一直玩到晚上。

No, my problem was I was spending too much time on social media, messaging friends, 不是，我的问题是花在社交媒体上的时间太多了，一直在给朋友发消息，

and commenting on other people's posts. 还评论别人的帖子。

I do all of that too, as well as shopping online and paying for everything with my phone. 我也做所有这些事，比如网购，还有用手机支付一切费用。

That is really why I don't see how anyone could live without a mobile phone. 这也就是为什么我真不明白，有人怎么能离得开手机呢。

How do you buy things or communicate with your friends? 那你买东西或者跟朋友联系都靠什么呀?

Since I've stopped using my phone, I go to physical stores and pay in cash. 自从我不用手机了，我就去实体店，用现金付款。

I've actually met friends from meals at cafes and restaurants. 我其实都是在咖啡馆和餐馆吃饭的时候，顺便跟朋友见面的。

That's great for you, but my friends and family don't live in this city, 你那样挺不错的，但我朋友和家人都不住在这座城市，

so we can't see each other often, and I don't have any choice but to chat with them online. 所以我们没法经常见面，除了在网上聊天，我别无选择。
