When my son completes a task, I can' t help but praise him. It' s only natural to give praise where praise is due, right? But is there such a thing as too much praise?

According to psychologist Katherine Phillip, children don' t benefit from _26_ praise as much as we' d like to think. "Parents often praise, believing they are building their child' s self-confidence. However, over-praising can have a _27_ effect," says Phillip, "When we use the same praise _28_, it may become empty and no longer valued by the child. It can also become an expectation that anything they do must be _29_ with praise. This may lead to the child avoiding taking risks due to fear of _30_ their parents."

Does this mean we should do away with all the praise? Phillip says no. "The key to healthy praise is to focus on the process rather than the _31_. It is the recognition of a child' s attempt, or the process in which they achieved something, that is essential," she says. "Parents should encourage their child to take the risks needed to learn and grow."

So how do we break the _32_ of praise we' re all so accustomed to? Phillip says it' s important to _33_ between "person praise" and "process praise". "Person praise is _34_ saying how great someone is. It' s a form of personal approval. Process praise is acknowledgement of the efforts the person has just _35_. Children who receive person praise are more likely to feel shame after losing," says Phillip.

Section B 段落匹配

Directions: 阅读下列段落，为每个句子选出所对应的段落。每个段落可能被选一次、多次或不被选择。

A A) Too often still, we think we know what poverty looks like. It' s the way we' ve been taught, the images we' ve been force-fed for decades. The chronically homeless. The undocumented immigrant. The urban poor, usually personified as a woman of color, the "welfare queen" politicians still too often reference.

B B) But as income inequality rises to record levels in the United States, even in the midst of a record economic expansion, those familiar images are outdated, hurtful, and counterproductive to focusing attention on solutions and building ladders of opportunity.

C C) Today' s faces of income inequality and lack of opportunity look like all of us. It' s Anna Landre, a disabled Georgetown University student fighting to keep health benefits that allow her the freedom to live her life. It' s Tiffanie Standard, a counselor for young women of color in' Philadelphia who want to be tech entrepreneurs—but who must work multiple jobs to stay afloat. It' s Ken Outlaw, a welder in rural North Carolina whose dream of going back to school at a local community college was dashed by Hurricane Florence—just one of the extreme weather events that have tipped the balance for strugglingAmericans across the nation.

D D) If these are the central characters of our story about poverty, what layers of perceptions, myths, and realities must we unearth to find meaningful solutions and support? In pursuit of revealing this complicated reality, Mothering Justice, led by women of color, went last year to the state capital in Lansing, Michigan, to lobby on issues that affect working mothers. One of the Mothering Justice organizers went to the office of a state representative to talk about the lack of affordable childcare-the vestiges (痕迹) of a system that expected mothers to stay home with their children while their husbands worked. A legislative staffer dismissed the activist' s concerns, telling her "my husband took care of that—I stayed home."

E E) That comment, says Mothering Justice director Danielle Atkinson, "was meant to shame" and relied on the familiar notion that a woman of color concerned about income inequality and programs that promote mobility must by definition be a single mom, probably with multiple kids. In this case, the Mothering Justice activist happened to be married. And in most cases in the America of 2019, the images that come to mind when we hear the words poverty or income inequality fail miserably in reflecting a complicated reality: poverty touches virtually all of us. The face of income inequality, for all but a very few of us, is the one we each see in the mirror.

F F) How many of us are poor in the U.S.? It depends on who you ask. According to the Census Bureau, 38 million people in the U. S. are living below the official poverty thresholds. Taking into account economic need beyond that absolute measure, the Institute for Policy Studies found that 140 million people are poor or low-income. That' s almost half the U. S. population.

G G) Whatever the measure, within that massive group, poverty is extremely diverse. We know that some people are more affected than others, like children, the elderly, people with disabilities, and people of color.

H H) But the fact that 4 in 10 Americans can' t come up with $ 400 in an emergency is a commonly cited statistic for good reason: economic instability stretches across race, gender, and geography-. It even reaches into the middle classes, as real wages have stagnated (不增长) for all but the very wealthy and temporary spells of financial instability are not uncommon.

I I) Negative images remain of who is living in poverty as well as what is needed to move out of it. The big American myth is that you can pull yourself up by your own efforts and change a bad situation into a good one. The reality is that finding opportunity without help from families, friends, schools, and community is virtually impossible. And the playing field is nothing close to level.

J J) The FrameWorks Institute, a research group that focuses on public framing of issues, has studied what sustains stereotypes and narratives of poverty in the United Kingdom. "People view economic success and wellbeing in life as a product of choice, willpower, and drive," says Nat Kendall-Taylor, CEO of FrameWorks. "When we see people who are struggling," he says, those assumptions "lead us to the perception that people in poverty are lazy, they don' t care, and they haven' t made the right decisions."

K K) Does this sound familiar? Similar ideas surround poverty in the U.S. And these assumptions give a false picture of reality. "When people enter into that pattern of thinking," says Kendall-Taylor, "it' s cognitively comfortable to make sense of issues of poverty in that way. It creates a kind of cognitive blindness—all of the factors external to a person' s drive and choices that they' ve made become invisibleand fade from view."

L L) Those external factors include the difficulties accompanying low-wage work or structural discrimination based on race, gender, or ability. Assumptions get worse when people who are poor use government benefits to help them survive. There is a great tension between "the poor" and those who are receiving what has become a dirty word: "welfare."

M M) According to the General Social Survey, 71 percent of respondents believe the country is spending too little an "assistance to the poor." On the other hand, 22 percent think we are spending too little on "welfare" : 37 percent believe we are spending too much.

N N) "Poverty has been interchangeable with people of color-specifically black women and black mothers," says Atkinson of Mothering Justice. It' s true that black mothers are more affected by poverty than many other groups, yet they are disproportionately the face of. poverty. For example, Americans routinely overestimate the share of black recipients of public assistance programs.

O O) In reality, most people will experience some form of financial hardship at some point in their lives. Indeed, people tend to dip in and out of poverty, perhaps due to unexpected obstacles like losing a job, or when hours of a low-wage job fluctuate.

P P) Something each of us can do is to treat each other with the dignity and sympathy that is deserved and to understand deeply that the issue of poverty touches all of us.

Section C 阅读理解

Passage One

Boredom has, paradoxically, become quite interesting to academics lately. In early May, London' s Boring Conference celebrated seven years of delighting in dullness. At this event, people flocked to talks about weather, traffic jams, and vending machine sounds, among other sleep-inducing topics. What, exactly, is everybody studying? One widely accepted psychological definition of boredom is "the distasteful experience of wanting, but being unable, to engage in satisfying activity." But how can you quantify a person' s boredom level and compare it with someone else' s? In 1986, psychologists introduced the Boredom Proneness Scale, designed to measure an individual' s overall tendency to feel bored. By contrast, the Multidimensional State Boredom Scale, developed in 2008, measures a person' s feelings of boredom in a given situation.

Boredom has been linked to behavior issues including inattentive driving, mindless snacking, excessive drinking, and addictive gambling. In fact, many of us would choose pain over boredom. One team of psychologists discovered that two-thirds of men and a quarter of women would rather self-administer electric shocks than sit alone with their thoughts for 15 minutes. Researching this phenomenon, another team asked volunteers to watch boring, sad, or neutral films, during which they could self-administer electric shocks. The bored volunteers shocked themselves more and harder than the sad or neutral ones did.

But boredom isn' t all bad. By encouraging self-reflection and daydreaming, it can spur creativity. An early study gave participants abundant time to complete problem-solving and word-association exercises. Once all the obvious answers were exhausted, participants gave more and more inventive answers to combat boredom. A British study took these findings one step further, asking subjects to complete a creative challenge (coming up with a list of alternative uses for a household item). One group of subjects did a boring activity first, while the others went straight to the creative task. Those whose boredom pumps had been primed were more productive.

Passage Two

Forests in countries like Brazil and the Congo get a lot of attention from environmentalists, and it is easy to see why. South America and sub-Saharan Africa are experiencing deforestation on an enormous scale; every year almost 5 million hectares are lost. But forests are also changing in rich Western countries. They are growing larger, both in the sense that they occupy more land and that the trees in them are bigger. What is going on?

Forests are spreading in almost all Western countries, with the fastest growth in places that historically had rather few trees. In 1990 28% of Spain was forested; now the proportion is 37%. In both Greece and Italy, the growth was from 26% to 32% over the same period. Forests are gradually taking more land in America and Australia. Perhaps most astonishing is the trend in Ireland. Roughly 1% of that country was forested when it became independent in 1922. Now forests cover 11% of the land, and the government wants to push the proportion to 18% by the 2040s.

Two things are fertilising this growth. The first is the abandonment of farmland, especially in high, dry places where nothing grows terribly well. When farmers give up trying to earn a living from farming or herding, trees simply move in; The second is government policy and subsidy. Throughout history, governments have protected and promoted forests for diverse reasons, ranging from the need for wooden warships to a desire to promote suburban house-building. Nowadays forests are increasingly welcome because they suck in carbon pollution from the air. The justifications change; the desire for more trees remains constant.

The greening of the West does not delight everyone. Farmers complain that land is being taken out of use by generously subsidised tree plantations. Parts of Spain and Portugal suffer from terrible forest fires. Others simply dislike the appearance of forests planted in neat rows. They will have to get used to the trees, however. The growth of Western forests seems almost as unstoppable as deforestation elsewhere.

1. What is catching environmentalists' attention nowadays?
   A. Rich countries are stripping poor ones of their resources.
   B. Forests are fast shrinking in many developing countries.
   C. Forests are eating away the fertile farmland worldwide.
   D. Rich countries are doing little to address deforestation.
2. Which countries have the fastest forest growth?
   A. Those that have newly achieved independence.
   B. Those that have the greatest demand for timber.
   C. Those that used to have the lowest forest coverage.
   D. Those that provide enormous government subsidies.
3. What has encouraged forest growth historically?
   A. The government' s advocacy.
   B. The use of wood for fuel.
   C. The favourable climate.
   D. The green movement.
4. What accounts for our increasing desire for forests?
   A. Their unique scenic beauty.
   B. Their use as fruit plantations.
   C. Their capability of improving air quality.
   D. Their stable supply of building materials.
5. What does the author conclude about the prospects of forestation?
   A. Deserts in sub-Saharan Africa will diminish gradually.
   B. It will play a more and more important role in people' s lives.
   C. Forest destruction in the developing world will quickly slow down.
   D. Developed and developing countries are moving in opposite directions.

College English Test, Band 4, Part 2, Listening Comprehension
Section A, Directions
In this section you will hear three news reports. At the end of each news report you will hear two or three questions.
Both the news report and the questions will be spoken only once.
After you hear a question, you must choose the best answer from the four choices marked
A, B, C, and D. Then mark the corresponding letter on the answer she won with a single line through the center.
News report 1.
A waiter has returned to check worth nearly $424,000 to retired social worker who lost it.
The waiter found a bank envelope while cleaning off a table last Saturday at a restaurant.
He ran outside but the customer was gone. He opened the envelope and got a shock.
After an unsuccessful search, the restaurant's owner called the Daily News for help.
The relieved customer was reunited with her check on Wednesday. It contained money from her apartment sale, already planned for a down payment on a new home. The customer did not tip the later after her meal. She tried to give him money later on, but he graciously declined.
The waiter, who's working his way through school, did accept the customer's apology and gratitude and said he was happy to have helped her.
Questions 1 and 2 are based on the news report you have just heard.
Question 1. What does the news report say about the waiter?
Question 2. What did the customer try to do when she got her check back?
News report 2
The village of Marath in Alaska voted on Tuesday to move to the states mainland.
The move is due to global warming and rising sea levels.
Most of the villages 169 registered voters took part in the town hall meeting.
They decided in a vote of 89 to 78 to move from their land on Sarajhev island near the Arctic Circle.
Mayor of Council Secretary Donna Barr said the vote was largely symbolic.
It will be costly financially to the community.
About 15 years ago they estimated the cost at $180 million.
I would figure it's much higher now, Barr said.
We don't see the move happening in our lifetime because of the funding.
The villages, roughly 600-50 residents, have seen warming temperatures, melt sea ice, and permanently frozen land. This has resulted in houses falling into the water.
At least 31 villages in Alaska face immediate threats due to climate change. The government accountability office reported in 2009. Questions 3 and 4 are based on the new support you have just heard. Question 3 What is Maryf's vote on Tuesday about?
Question 4. Why did Donna Bar say they wouldn't see the plan carried out anytime soon?
News report 3.
A man in Halifax, Canada wanted to find out if people were thankful for someone holding the door open for them.
The social experiment showed that 99 out of 100 people expressed gratitude.
I didn't think we were going to get 99.
I don't know why, but I was pleasantly surprised because it went beyond just thank you.
People got into conversations with us.
Set Steve Foreann, CEO of Gratitude at Work.
What we know from research is that from grateful people come good things, he said.
A simple way to induce gratitude in people is opening doors and so we went to six places and opened the doors for people.
For the experiment, Foreann's team went to a shopping centre, a mall, two office buildings, and a coffee shop. The door was held for 15 to 20 people at a time at each location.
We did have one that didn't say thank you. We're not here to judge them, because on any given day that could be me or you. I suspect out of the 100 people that were probably a bunch of them having a bad day, but grateful people make people grateful, so for Anne.
Question 6. What did Steve Ferren and his team do in the experiment?
Question 7. What do we learn from the news report?

Both the conversation and the questions will be spoken only once. After you hear a question, you must choose the best answer from the four choices marked A, B, C and D.
Then marked the corresponding letter on answer sheet 1, with a single line through the center.
Conversation 1.
Raise solar, recess speaking, how can I help?
Hi, my name is Winston. I wish to enquire about solar panel installations.
Yes, what would you like to know?
Well, my neighbour installed panels on his roof about a year ago, in order to power his hot water.
He tells me it has saved him over $500 thus far. Does that sound about right to you?
Well, I'm not familiar with your neighbor or his particular setup. But that amount is definitely possible.
I can tell you that the average 4 bedroom house may typically have a roof with 50 square meters of surface area.
Four panels on one side of that roof could save a family of four around $300 a year.
Okay, that sounds about right then.
My house is about the size you described, but my neighbours is bigger.
I'm not sure how many panels he has up there, but he does have a large family of six.
Are you interested in stalling some solar panels on your roof sir?
Yes, I'm considering it.
If you wish to come into our office, we could show you the different solutions we offer.
OK, I might do that. But just quickly if you don't mind, could you tell me approximately how much a typical installation costs? Like, say, four panels?
Prices do vary depending on different factors, but as a rough estimate, it's around $2000.
But you know, a typical household will make back that initial investment in about five years.
OK, I see. Thank you.
Question 8-11 are based on the conversation you have just heard.
Question 8- What is the man's purpose for calling the woman?
Question 9. What do we learn about the man's neighbor from the conversation?
Question 10. What is one of the man's chief concerns?
Question 11. How long will it take a typical household?
to make back the initial investment.
Conversation 2
Good afternoon. Sorry to have kept you waiting. How can I help you?
Oh, no problem. I'm interested in booking a holiday to Australia.
And wonder if you could tell me what deals you have?
Sure. Are you only looking for flights or a package holiday with everything included?
When you say everything, what do you mean?
Well, a package holiday would include your flights, hotels, meals,
Daterips to different places of interest and transport to and from the airport.
Yeah, that sounds pretty good. I'm going with my family, so it would be nice to have everything taken care of. So what sort of deals do you have for package holidays then?
All sorts really? How long do you want to go for and of what dates?
Two weeks around Christmas time would be great.
Okay, let me check that for you.
Here's one, 14 nights in South Eastern Australia, 5 nights in Sydney and 5 nights in Melbourne.
And then for the other four nights you can choose from a list of trips to other places nearby.
You could visit Canberra, for example, or the Blue Mountains, or you could go for a drive down the Great Ocean Road.
Also, if you're interested in wine, you could go on a tour of the places where they grow grapes and make wine.
That sounds great. It's good we can choose some activities ourselves.

Passage 1. Tourists taking a holiday in the Indonesian Island of Bali are facing a new $14 per person tax when they arrive on the holiday island from next year.
But this is a green tax, which Bali Governor, Waiyan Costa, has been working on for months and which is designed to help clean up the island's natural environment and with good reason too.
Indonesia is drowning in plastics.
Recycling is not one of the country's strong points.
It's not uncommon to be offered many more plastic bags than one could ever need when visiting supermarkets and shopping malls.
But slowly, things are starting to change for the better.
Back in 2016, the medium-sized city of Bunger Mason banned single-use plastic bags.
The city of Bogor followed suit in 2018.
A few months ago, Crossster announced a plan that would not only ban single-use plastic bags from supermarkets and convenient stores, but plastic bags and straws across the island.
The regulation will come into full effect next month.
We received a fast and quick response from the Bollini's people.
Not only positive responses from the Bollini's, we received good responses from the central government, other local governments, and even from overseas, costor told the Sydney Morning Harrow this week during an interview.

Passage 2. An endangered species of whale is experiencing a small baby boom of the America. The Norfolk Atlantic right whale is one of the rare species of whale on the planet, numbering only about 411. But the center for coastal studies said Friday that his aerial survey team spotted a mum with two babies in Cape Cod Bay a day earlier. That brings the number seen in nearby waters alone this year to three. That's big news because the whale population has been falling, and no baby whales were seen last year. In all, seven baby whales have been spotted so far this year. The whale population has become endangered due to commercial wailing activities and recent years. This is because they are sometimes hunted for their meat or their skin. Overhunting could lead to the disappearance of the whale population, possibly causing major problems to the global food chain.
The whales give birth after southeast coast of America in the winter and travel to feeding grounds of the northeast coast in the early spring.
The northeast coast is critically important source of food.
The animals often feed close to shore.
This provides watches on land with unbeatable views of one of the rarest of marine mammals.
It's illegal to get within 1,500 feet of the animals without a federal research permit, so whale watches are discouraged from attempting to get close to the whales.
Questions 19-21 are based on the passage you have just heard.
Question 19.
What do we learn from the passage about the North Atlantic right whale?
Question 20. What has caused the decline of the whale population in recent years?
Question 21. Why do the whales travel to the Northeast Coast of America in the early spring?
Passage 3 An average person consumes 144 pints of milk a year.
But 40% of that is poured under cereal, and 60% of those people are children.
But what was once advertised as nutritious is becoming unpopular.
American's drink 37% less milk than they did in the 1970s.
And in the UK, dairy consumption overall has fallen by a third in the past 20 years.
Milk is increasingly being described in a negative light.
A recent blogs have justed, maybe people are drinking less milk because it is poisonous to many of us.
Lactose is the sugar found in milk and dairy products.
It needs a series of complex proteins to break it down.
Without enough of these proteins, the lactose is broken down by bacteria in the human body.
This can cause physical pain and produce gas in the stomach.
However, after we have finished breast or formula feeding, most of us don't continue producing the complex proteins in our body, which are necessary to break down the lactose.
Despite the problems in digesting milk, it does provide many benefits.
Milk is nutritious. It contains vitamins A and D, as well as protein, and isn't full of calories.
You can test yourself by drinking a large glass of milk. If you get sick in your stomach
Within the next 24 hours, you are lacking the proteins to digest milk.
Question 23. How do Americans and British people think of milk nowadays?
Question 24. Why does drinking milk cause pain in some people?
Question 25. What does the passage say is a benefit of milk?
That's the end of listening comprehension.
